television has never been exclusive to the home in television at work kit hughes explores the forgotten history of how u s workplaces used television to secure industrial efficiency support corporate expansion and manage the hearts minds and bodies of twentieth century workers challenging our longest held understandings of the medium hughes positions television at the heart of a post fordist reconfiguration of the american workplace revolving around dehumanized technological systems among other things business and industry built private television networks to distribute programming created complex cctv data retrieval systems encouraged the use of videotape for worker self evaluation used video cassettes for training distributed workforces and wired cantinas for employee entertainment in uncovering industrial television as a prolific sphere of media practice television at work reveals how labor arrangements and information architectures shaped by these uses of television were foundational to the rise of the digitally mediated corporation and to a globalizing economy not only is everyday conversation increasingly dependent on television but more and more people are appearing on television to discuss social and personal issues is any public good served by these programmes or are they simply trashy entertainment which fills the schedules cheaply talk on television examines the value and significance of televised public debate analysing a wide range of programmes including kilroy donohue and the oprah winfrey show the authors draw on interviews with both the studio participants and with those watching at home they ask how the media manage discussion programmes and whether the programmes really are providing new spaces for public participators they find out how audiences interpret the programmes when they appear on the screen themselves and they unravel the conventions debate romance therapy which make up the genre they also consider tv s function as a medium of education and information finally discussing the dangers and opportunities the genre holds for audience participation and public debate in the future this history of radio news reporting recounts and assesses the contributions of radio toward keeping america informed since the 1920s it identifies distinct periods and milestones in broadcast journalism and includes a biographical dictionary of important figures who brought news to the airwaves americans were dependent on radio for cheap entertainment during the great depression and for critical information during the second world war when no other medium could approach its speed and accessibility radio s diminished influence in the age of television beginning in the 1950s is studied as the aural medium shifted from being at the core of many families activities to more specialized applications reaching narrowly defined listener bases many people turned elsewhere for the news and now even tv is challenged by yet newer media the introduction of technological marvels throughout the past hundred years has significantly altered what americans hear and how when and where they hear it we are witnessing a dynamic reshaping of the european mediascape this has been underway for more than a decade since the fall of the berlin wall in 1989 the growing impact of globalisation and the birth of new technologies and new media or the convergence between old and new media a new and more intense mediatisation of society and everyday life is emerging this is happening alongside the rapid reconstruction of the cultural and economic landscape of europe itself in this transformation the communicative and ideological dimensions the digitalisation of technology and changes in culture the imaginary the discursive universe of politics and communication are all crucial areas for research the cultural industries film television books magazines entertainment and music but also the world of news actuality infotainment and the internet are key areas for the study of what we may begin to understand as a changing european culture in all its complexity and with all its differences and conflicts the media and the cultural industries are among the fastest growing sectors in the global economy
